

CALL FOR PAPERS – October/2017

Católica Law Review welcomes the submission of articles in the field of Public Law from all legal scholars (including law professors, practicing lawyers, doctoral candidates, and graduate students) for the January issue of 2018. Dissertations and papers written by graduate students in the context of master and postgraduate programmes are not eligible for publication unless they have been subject to very substantial editing for publication purposes and comply with the formal requirements laid down in the style guide.

Católica Law Review is an international, bilingual, academic, and peer reviewed legal journal of the Católica Research Centre for the Future of Law of the School of Law of Universidade Católica Portuguesa, and is published by the Universidade Católica Editora (UCE).

Designed to showcase outstanding legal research and to reflect the evolution of legal thought, Católica Law Review is a journal open to all national and international authors, and is structured around the most demanding international standards of peer review.
